Deborah Leuchovius has served as project director for PACER's federally-funded Technical Assistance on Transition and the Rehabilitation Act (TATRA) Project since 1994. Leuchovius, the parent, sibling, and daughter of family members with disabilities, also represents PACER on several national technical assistance projects addressing transition and family issues. Through the TATRA Project's annual conference for parent information and training centers, presentations to professional audiences, nationally disseminated publications, and collaborative activities with other national programs, Leuchovius has helped families, consumer advocates, and professionals increase their knowledge of family contributions to successful postschool outcomes for youth with disabilities.
